Wedding Bells to Ring for Young Man and Belle He Dragged From Sea.

Richard Baren, a young salesman employed at No. 830 Broadway, will marry the girl he rescued from the water at Arverne last Sunday. Mis-Beatrice Cohen, whose parents live at No. 70 West One Handred and Thir teenth street and who has been sum mering at the Long Island resort, got beyond the lines during the afternoon Baren and his companion, Edward Goldstone, of No. 68 East One Hunired and Eighteenth street, were sunning selves on the sand when they heard her cry for help.

Baren at once plunged in and paddled to the girl. He caught the cape of her guit as she was sinking, and headed for shore. Halfway Goldstone joined in the rescue and together they landed Miss Cohen safely. Without leaving their names they departed. That same night the trio again met, and introductions followed.

. For an All-Wool Fall Model Brill Suit of Usual $15 Standard

Ten dollars was considered impossible for a suit of this quality a few years ago, when trimmings, fabric, labor-everything-cost a third less than they do now.

Ten dollars is possible now because of the Brill directed tailoring organizations, because of Brill stores' close mill affiliations, and because of Brill stores' contentment with a profit percentage far below the usual necessary profit percentage.

Ten dollars is wonderfully little for an ALL-WOOL suit, cut on correct new Fall models, tailored and trimmed to hold shape, fit and style until the end—a suit that cannot be equalled in style, fit, tailoring or fabric in all America at less than 1/3 to 1/2 more in price. Sizes to fit men of all builds—wide choice of new and correct models and patterns.
